Disclaimer

This guide has been produced in good faith and is based on the style as recommended in the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association (the APA manual), 6th edition, published in 2010.

Information about APA style is available at <http://www.apastyle.org/learn/index.aspx>

While it will serve as a guide, and the principles of APA referencing style have been applied to some examples that traditionally do not appear in the hard copy APA manual, students with queries should consult the APA manual 6th edition or their lecturers for clarification.

Note: Remember you will find it helpful to check the Index when looking for a specific item.

Why reference/cite?

References must be provided whenever you use someone else's opinions, theories, data or organisation of material. You need to reference information from books, articles, DVDs, the World Wide Web, other print or electronic sources and personal communications. A reference is required if you:

- quote (use someone else's exact words)
- copy (use figures, tables or structure)
- paraphrase (convert someone else's ideas into your own words)
- summarise (give a brief account of someone else's ideas).

How to reference/cite

When referencing a paraphrase within the text, the surname of the author, followed by a comma and the year of publication, are given wholly or partly in round brackets. If referencing a direct quote, add a comma and page number after the year.

If the author's name is in the text then you only need (year) or (year, p.) if a direct quote.

At the end of the task provide a reference list with all the items referred to/cited in the text. Put this in full detail in alphabetical order. See page 58 for an example of a reference list.

In-text references

There are two ways of referencing (citing): author prominent and information prominent.

Author prominent

This is when you give prominence to the author by using the author's surname (family name) as part of your sentence with the date and the page number in parentheses (round brackets).

Direct quote example:

Unterhalter (2007, p. 5) argues that "gender equality in schooling is an aspiration of global social justice."

Paraphrase example:

Unterhalter (2007, p. 5) suggests that equal treatment of the genders in education should be an issue of justice for every society.

Note: Include the page number when quoting the author's exact words as well as when paraphrasing information from a specific sentence, paragraph, chapter, table or chart.

Information prominent

The other way of referencing (citing) gives prominence to the information, with all the required referencing details in parentheses at the end of the citation.

Direct quote example:

It has been argued that "gender equality in schooling is an aspiration of global social justice" (Unterhalter, 2007, p. 5).

Paraphrase example:

Equal treatment of gender in education should be an aim of every society (Unterhalter 2007, p. 5).

Note: Include the page number when quoting the author's exact words as well as when paraphrasing information from a specific sentence, paragraph, chapter, table or chart.

What is plagiarism?

Plagiarism is the presentation of work, ideas or data of others without appropriate acknowledgement (CQUniversity Academic Board, 2009, p. 1).

http://policy.cqu.edu.au/Policy/policy_file.do?policyid=1244

CQUniversity's Student Misconduct and Plagiarism policy can be found at:

http://policy.cqu.edu.au/Policy/policy_file.do?policyid=1245

Note: If you want to use material from one of your previous assessment tasks in a current assessment task, you must ask permission from your current lecturer.

Paraphrasing or referring to an idea contained in another work

Paraphrasing is when you write published materials in your own words without changing the original meaning. The manual states, "When paraphrasing or referring to an idea contained in another work, you are encouraged to provide a page or paragraph number, especially when it would help an interested reader locate the relevant passage in a long or complex text" (APA, 2010, p. 171, Section 6.04).

Use of italics

Italics are used for the name of a journal, newspaper, magazine, book, film, website, etc. The exception is informally published materials. In blog posts, YouTube videos, message board posts, etc. do not use italics.

(APA, 2010, pp. 104–106, Section 4.21)

Use of quotation marks

Double quotation marks are used around direct quotes of fewer than 40 words.

(APA, 2010, p. 170, Section 6.03)

Quote within a quote

When a quote appears within a quote use single quote marks. For example:

“The first words of Melville’s Moby Dick are ‘Call me Ishmael’ and these words are full of significance” was the first statement in Smith’s memorable speech (Johns, 1995, p. 43).

Minimal capitalisation

Capitalise only the first word of titles of books and articles, and any proper nouns (e.g., names of people, places or organisations). This is minimal capitalisation. If there is a subtitle, capitalise the first word after the colon. For example, The hero within: Six archetypes we live by.

Capitalise the first word and all important words in the names of journals, newspapers and magazines. For example:

Peterson, J., & Schmidt, A. (1999). Widening the horizons for secondary schools. Journal of Secondary Education, 3(8), 89–106.

Quoting incorrect spelling, punctuation or grammar from an original source

The manual states, “Direct quotations must be accurate If any incorrect spelling, punctuation, or grammar in the source might confuse readers, insert the word sic, italicised and bracketed, immediately after the error in the quotation.” For example, “ . . . italicized [sic] and bracketed” (APA, 2010, p. 172, Section 6.06).

Quotations of 40 or more words

These should be formatted as a freestanding block of text as follows:

- omit quotation marks
- indent the block 1.25 cm from the left margin (the same indent used for a new paragraph)
- use double line spacing
- use the same font and size as the text
- give the source and page number in brackets after the final full-stop.

(APA, 2010, p. 171, Section 6.03)

For example:

Scholarly work is required to meet certain standards in order to be published:

Academic material of standing is peer reviewed—that is, prior to publication the article or book written by an author (or authors) is sent out to other academics in the same field to be reviewed and the authors then revise their material based on the recommendations of the reviewers. (Taines, 2008, p. 29)

Always give the page number for quotations or to indicate information from a specific sentence, paragraph, chapter, table or chart. The word “page” is abbreviated but not chapter. For example:

The painting was assumed to be by Matisse (Powell, 1989, Chapter 6, p. 7), but later analysis showed it to be a forgery (Murphy, 1999, p. 85).

Quoting online material that has no page numbers

Normally, direct quotations of online material are cited with author, year and page number in brackets but many electronic sources do not provide page numbers. In this case, if there are paragraph numbers, use the paragraph number in place of the page number, with the abbreviation para. for a direct quote. For example:

A BP spokesman reported that “The new construction includes a containment cap with a built-in ‘blow-out preventer’, the device that failed to cut off the oil flow” (Mann, 2010, para. 4).

If there are no paragraph numbers but there are headings, cite the first three or four words of the heading and the number of the paragraph following it. You will need to count the paragraphs yourself. For example: (Education for Change, 2009, “Our growth plan”, para. 2). (APA, 2010, pp. 171–172, Section 6.05)

Use of city, state, country location information

Provide city and state for US and Australian publications, e.g., Princeton, NJ; Rockhampton, Qld. Provide city, state and country for all other publications.

(APA, 2010, p. 186, Section 6.30)

Difference between a reference list and a bibliography

A reference list includes all the sources of information that have been cited (referenced) in-text in a piece of work and is located at the end of the piece of work and arranged in alphabetical order.

A bibliography lists all works consulted when preparing a piece of work whether or not the work has been cited in the document. This means that all the works referred to within the document as well as all works consulted but not referred to would appear in the bibliography in alphabetical order. Unless your assignment instructions specifically request a bibliography, a reference list is generally all that is required.

If your assignment task specifies there is no need for in-text referencing but asks for a bibliography, the bibliography will list in alphabetical order all the resources you consulted for the task. The bolded heading of Bibliography would be used.

Formatting your reference list

When formatting your reference list, use the following guidelines:

- begin your reference list on a new page
- use the heading References centred
- use a hanging indent throughout, i.e., the first line of each reference should be flush against the left margin, while the second and any subsequent lines should be indented
- do not leave a blank line after each reference
- use double-line spacing throughout
- put your list in alphabetical order by author's surname/family name.

See the reference list at the end of this document for an example.

Referencing a source not covered by the APA manual

This will happen rarely, but should it happen to you, this is what the manual has to say:

Because one purpose of listing references is to enable readers to retrieve and use the sources, each entry usually contains the following elements: author, year of publication, title, and publishing or retrieval data—all information necessary for unique identification and library search. (APA, 2010, p. 193, Section 7)

You can also find additional examples on the APA website: <http://www.apastyle.org>

See especially the tutorial on The Basics of APA Style.

Journal articles and periodicals

A journal article with a DOI

Many journal articles and other online documents are assigned a Digital Object Identifier, or DOI. A DOI is a unique string of letters and numbers that identifies a document. All DOIs begin with the number 10. They can often be found on the first page of a journal article, or in the database citation information.

A DOI can be used in two ways to find an online version of a document.

First, it can be entered at the CrossRef website: <http://www.crossref.org>

Second, it can be appended to the following Web address: <http://dx.doi.org/>

Note: If you are searching for an article with a DOI, it is usually better to search for the journal by title in the CQUni Library catalogue rather than use the DOI as described above. If the journal is available through the Library, you will be able to access the article free of charge, while a DOI search is likely to take you to a commercial website.

If the article or other document you are citing has a DOI, this should be included at the end of the reference. No other retrieval information is then necessary; there is no need to provide a database name, retrieved date or Web address (URL). Wherever possible, copy and paste the DOI to ensure accuracy.

When adding the DOI use the following format: doi:10xxxx/xxxxxxxxxx

Shariff, J. F. (2011). Navigating assisted death and end-of-life care. CMAJ, 183(6), 643–644. doi:10.1503/cmaj.091845

Journal and periodical articles in print

The volume number of a work will follow the title as an italicised number:

Author, A. A. (year). Article title. Name of Journal, 7, 23–45.

Issue numbers will follow the volume number in round brackets:

Author, A. A. (year). Article title. Name of Journal, 7(2), 223–245.

Peterson, J., & Schmidt, A. (1999). Widening the horizons for secondary schools. Journal of Secondary Education, 3(8), 89–106.

(APA, 2010, Section 7.01, pp. 198–202)

Journal article with no DOI from a database, CRO or a .pdf file

If you found the article by using a CQUni Library database or CQUni Course Resources Online and there is no DOI, you should reference the article as shown on pp. 29-32.

If the journal article is in an online journal then you give the Web address (URL) of the home page of the journal, magazine or newsletter. You may have to do a Web search to find this.

If you found the article on the Web and its URL ends with a .pdf extension then you reference the article as if you read it in print.

(APA, 2010, Section 7.01, p. 198)

Journal article from an online journal

For example:

Huang, D., & Cho, J. (2009). Academic enrichment in high-functioning homework after-school programs. Journal of Research in Childhood Education, 23, 382–393.

Issue numbers

Note: Issue numbers are only needed if the journal is paginated separately by issue (i.e., if each issue begins at page 1).

If a journal, magazine or newsletter does not use volume numbers but gives the season or the month, include the season or month after the year. For example:

Beemster, M. (2008, Spring). Saving the Southern Bell Frog. Australian Landcare, 27–29.

Chandler-Crisp, S. (1988, May). “Aerobic” writing: A writing practice model. Writing Lab Newsletter, pp. 9–11.

If a periodical does not have a volume number but is published frequently, give the month and day of publication after the year. For example:

Author, A. A. (year, month day). Article title. Name of Journal, 23–45.

(APA, 2010, p. 200, Section 4.11)

For example:

Kauffmann, S. (1993, October 18). On films: Class consciousness. The New Republic, 30.

Using URL references

Be aware that most word processing packages will automatically underline the Internet address—the examples in the APA manual are not underlined (do not have a hyperlink) so you will need to remove the underline. Highlight the URL, click off the underline icon, and change the font colour to black.

Unpublished sources

Always try to use published materials for your paper. Unpublished materials usually comprise theses or papers/abstracts presented at a conference. Be wary of using them. If in doubt, consult your lecturer to see if the resource can be used.

If you want to use material from one of your previous assessment tasks, you must ask the lecturer for permission to do so.

Appendices

An appendix comprises supplementary material that is collected and appended at the back of a book or report—supporting evidence for your assignment. The word Appendices is the plural form.

Appendices go after the reference list. Each appendix is a separate item and goes on a separate page. They are usually lettered, not numbered—Appendix A, Appendix B and so on.

Any tables or figures in an appendix take their caption from that appendix, e.g., in Appendix A, the table would be Table A1; likewise for a figure, Figure A1 and so on.

When to use numbers expressed in words

In a text where numbers are not a significant focus, use words for numbers up to one hundred.

In addition, use words for common fractions, e.g., “one-fifth of the class.”

Use numerals for numbers over nine in documents where numbers occur frequently.

A number, however, is always expressed in words at the beginning of a sentence, e.g., “Forty-eight per cent of the sample”

Check out the number examples on this site: <http://www.apastyle.org/learn/faqs/numbers-as-words.aspx>

When to use numbers expressed as numerals

Use figures for numbers:

- preceding measurement, e.g., 3 cm
- grouped in figures, e.g., 3 of 21
- used as statistics, e.g., 4% of the population
- used in times, dates, ages, money.

Adding headers to the title page and abstract

Handy Hints

Go to <http://www.cqu.edu.au/about-us/service-and-facilities/communications-learning-centre/referencing> to access Referencing on the Communication Learning Site.

Look for the sentence Check out some frequently asked questions about and click on APA Website FAQs.

What follows is a set of guidelines on which you may model future referencing. You may find that the examples given do not always reflect exactly the details for a resource which you wish to reference. In this case, include the details you consider would be needed to locate that resource. If you are concerned, check with your lecturer. Remember: Include the page number when quoting the author’s exact words as well as when paraphrasing information from a specific sentence, paragraph, chapter, table or chart.

Please note: Use of double quotation marks is essential around words that are directly quoted from a resource.

Note: Tables

1. A table formed from your own information will not need a source.
2. A table taken from the work of another author needs to be sourced.

The caption goes above the table—on the next line use italics for the title of the table—have a look.

If the table is in the text then it is Table 1. If it is in an appendix then it takes the appendix letter, Table A1.

The source is included as a note below the table.

Example: From a book—full details of the source go underneath the table using the following format.

Note: Title of Book (p. xx), by A. T. Author and T. P. Author, year, Place of Publication: Publisher.

Examples of medical problems

And underneath the table:

Note: Preterm birth: Causes, consequences and prevention (p. 149), by R. E. Behrman and A. S. Butler (Eds.), 2007. Washington, DC: National Academies Press.

Example: From a journal article—full details of the source go underneath the table using the following format.

Model of hope relationships

And underneath the table:

Note: Hope and social support as resilience factors against psychological distress of mothers who care for children with chronic physical conditions, by T. V. Horton and J. L. Wallander, 2001, Rehabilitation Psychology, 46, p. 387.

Appendix B—Figure format

Note: Figures

1. If the figure is done from your own information then no source is required.
2. If you get the information from another source then you must source the figure.

The caption goes beneath the image with the source credited at the end of the caption (Publication Manual, pp. 158–167).

Italicise the word Figure and the number: Figure 1. If the figure is in an appendix then it takes the appendix letter and the number: Figure B1.

Example from a journal article:

Figure 1. Model of hypothesized relationships. From Hope and social support as resilience factors against psychological distress of mothers who care for children with chronic physical conditions, by T. V. Horton and J. L. Wallander, 2001, Rehabilitation Psychology, 46, p. 386.

Example from a book:
